UHD's Scantron Effect

UHD President William Flores presented a new survey at his convocation for all stakeholders to fill out on Thursday, September 10, 2009. Since its presentation, the survey has been filled out by 400 surveyors out of all 12,740 within the past week. The survey is available to all on the from page of the website. What opportunities exist for UHD that we are not currently tapping (resources, partnerships, unaddressed needs, groups we’re not reaching, etc.)? If you were president for a day what one thing would you do to make UHD a better place? According to Director of Public Relations at UHD Sue Davis, “Dr. Flores’ goal was to learn more about UHD. The survey lets us see how those closest to the institution view our challenges and our successes and will help us chart the University’s future.”

Aside from the survey, Dr. Flores has been learning more about UHD by meeting with students at the council of organizations and in elevators with students at the council of organizations. “I would try to do something about school spirit because that is my main concern,” said Cruz. “We need a sense of belonging in this school. It hink with high academic standards and school spirit we can be a better place.”

What does UHD do better? Carlos Cruz, a nineteen-year-old Education Major, has not taken Dr. Flores’ survey yet. “I have seen a couple of questions from the survey and have seen him at the council of organizations.” When asked the “president for a day question” from the survey, Cruz says, “I would try to do something about school spirit because that is my main concern. We need a sense of belonging in this school. It hink with high academic standards and school spirit we can be a better place.”

UHD's 2010 Study Abroad Program

Picture this—a curious traveler from the mysterious west stands before the great Colosseum of Rome. Like the gladiators before him, he is in awe of the colossus that is now the legendary bloody grave for hundreds of those battle-worn warriors. For this traveler though, there is no gruesome and bloody demise; for him there is only the mind-enriching experience of Italian history and...course credit? You too could be this curious traveler. The UHD College of Humanities and Social Sciences is preparing to launch its annual spring Study Abroad Program.

This trip will occur May 17-28, 2010, right between graduation and Summer I semester. For the past several years, UHD students and alumni have been able to participate in the program that has traveled to historic destinations such as England, Scotland and France. This year, they are expanding the program and reaching east to take student travelers to Italy. Cities that will be experienced will be Orvieto, Pisa, Florence, and one of the most powerful historic world cities—Rome. Each of these cities offers students a chance to visit historic sites like the influential Vatican, Michelangelo’s Sistine Chapel, Accademia Museum (where the sculpture, David resides) and the photo-worthy Leaning Tower of Pisa.

So where does the course credit catch come into play? Well, once accepted into the Study Abroad Program, you’ll enroll in one or two classes of your choice full the Spring 2010 semester that correlate with the trip to Italy. These classes meet only once per week with the remainder of the course time being your studies while in Italy-fontasico. This year’s trip will offer a theatre course, an English course and an art course (which can count as Humanities credit, if needed).

All of these courses will be focused on Italy’s contribution to or influence on these areas of academics. Here’s a quick list of what will be offered to get you thinking and planning about adding these to your spring schedule:

I got dressed up the ochre day to go to yet another interview for a job that really needed last month ... Did my hair and makeup nice and usual, put on a pair of heels and double checked there was nothing in my teeth. Opened the front door and low and behold, it was pouring down rain, "gully washing" as I've heard some southerners describe it. In the middle of September in Houston I could not have been surprised, but it definitely caused a damper in my morning...

Seeing as I'm from San Diego, California and just returned from summer break with a small amount of my belongings, there was only a single hooded jacket in my closet- of course the ever-fashionable off-white with "fur" around the hood kind of jacket I've all seen in the middle of winter when it's actually cold when it rains. I laughed at myself as I put it on, knowing I would immediately start sweating in the humid heat outside. Regardless of the inconvenience, I continued my adventure anyways.

Life seems to throw curveballs everytime we turn around. During the school year it's no different. Everyday students are faced with difficult circumstances and situations that make school seem to be an even lower priority. Events far more traumatic than my weather faux pas definitely need attention before school can return to the top of the priority list. It's important in the mix of it all to not give up mid-semester what you've spent time and money to start.

UHD students are very fortunate to have a number of services available to help anytime. From access to counselors and advisors, to helpful professors, tutors, library and study facilities and people throughout campus who can provide resources and information on almost anything you may need, students have a solid support staff to help ensure their success. Obtaining higher education is no easy pursuit, but is well worth the temporary dedication and focus it takes. Cameras Are Watching

With the increased amount of students at UHD, the police department has done its best to be more present around campus. According to UHD Police Chief Rick Boyle, "we have made it our goal to be more visible." UHD Police and Security has made it their goal to patrol more throughout campus where pending funds can provide additional security to the public. The library is one of the first places to have a security officer patrol for just that purpose. There was a serious problem with missing books and other items from the library. Now, Janette Martin is one of the security officers at the entrance of the library and one of the first security officers hired to patrol that area.

Janette Martin said "One of the main focuses of my job is the prevention of the loss of books, personal belongings and other items through theft. I'm also here to protect our staff and students' personal security." Christine Stempinski, the Assistant Director of Public Services said, "There is a stronger effect having the security more present in the library." More security could be provided because the university has recently awarded the UHD Police Department a larger budget. This new budget will allow more security officers patrolling throughout the university and video camera surveillance once more funding is given.

Currently there are cameras in each building, but more cameras won't be added until more funds are distributed.

One way that could help prevent or reduce crime is to report it to the police. Someone witnesses something suspicious or sees a crime, report it. Sometimes the security officer might be on another lead, but if the crime is reported they can help. Remember to be aware of your surroundings. Also, not leaving personal items unattended can help prevent theft.

Who will be Houston's New Mayor?

Gene Locke is currently a member of the law firm Andrews Kurth LLP and represents municipal organizations such as METRO and the Port of Houston Authority along with other private businesses, but he began as a University of Houston student who graduated in 1969. Since then he has earned a degree at the South Texas College of Law and been employed by both a congressman and a Houston mayor. As City Attorney and in his own practice after employment with the city, he had a part in erecting some of Houston's most well known structures including Minute Maid Park, Reliant Park and the Toyota Center. He has also been very involved in community groups and associations which help him to serve the city and the less fortunate.

Lieutenant Colonel Roy Morales, United States Air Force-Retired, had an admirable career in the United States Air Force. Since January 2007, Morales has been a member of the Harris County Department of Education Board of Trustees. He chairs the Audit Committee and the Federal Community Initiative Committee which oversees Area 1 Head Start. As a Trustee, he is in charge of setting a tax rate that affects 4 million county residents and approves a $90 million budget that provides education services to over 20,000 children. In the past, Morales served as an Adjunct Associate Professor in the area of Mathematics at Chapman University.

By being the only candidate with an active Secret Clearance, Morales hopes to protect Harris County residents from man-made disasters. Morales has in fact only increased by 3.6 percent, which was then rounded up to 4 percent. We are currently reviewing our Figures Policy, but please view our Editorial Policy below.

Electric, Pop, Punk, Product

Influenced by the likes of Daft Punk and Alphabeat, a new electric pop band from Chicago, Illinois breathed dance into the audience at the Meridian on September 12. Breathe Electric, a band created only a year ago and already working with Alliance Music Management and hitting Hot Topic stores across the country, are currently trying to work their way up the musical ladder. Although Breathe Electric is a pop band, Grant Harris (the leading man) believes their sound differs from some of the other bands you may hear by popular ear. "I guess in comparison to other bands our stuff is a lot different because not everything is guitar driven. I guess in comparison to other bands our stuff is a lot different because that was basically me just still having fun with it. I wasn't taking it very serious. I was still in school full time. The cool thing about doing Emotion was that I got to work with a real producer in a real studio," Harris said.

Growing up with a father who was classically trained in piano, Harris was able to broaden his musical interests and joined the school band playing saxophone and then writing lyrics for songs toward the end of junior high. These songs encouraged him to join his first pop-punk band in high school. However, not accomplishing a whole lot and the band moving onto college, Harris began taking lyrics he had written and applying them to music he made through special computer software. During this time he became a lot more interested in electronic music.

When first creating this new music, Harris thought of it as a fun side project and was able to create free demos online which were fairly popular. After this he released his first EP Honestly. Although only his second effort, Breathe Electric's latest EP, Emotion, released on August 18, has been brought to listeners by a more experienced Harris. "Emotion is a lot different than my first album because that was basically me just still having fun with it. I wasn't taking it very serious. I was still in school full time. The cool thing about doing Emotion was that I got to work with a real producer in a real studio," Harris said.

Although Harris's producer is not high in popularity, Harris feels that Ian Kirkpatrick is destined for producing stardom. While working with Breathe Electric, he put them in a studio house that they were able to stay and record. He was also working with pop-punk band the Plain White T's. Kirkpatrick seems to be a good influence on the bands he works with.

"Working with him was a real eye-opening experience. He really showed me different things you can do with electronics and with different sounds and brought everything to a whole new level," Harris said.

We gave you some information about the Greenhouse Gas Inventory (GGI) in the last issue, now let us elaborate. A GGI helps in informing us about the breakdown of energy consumption on campus; and in turn, it becomes a must for starting efforts to curb the consumption. Among the colleges that have conducted a GGI, one was able to pinpoint the exact source of some of their school's useless consumption. For years an unnecessary water pump turned on at lam and off at 5 am, and this time frame made it virtually undetectable. With the aid of that GGI, they were able to attribute the energy loss to the pump and fix that. It's likely that the next person won't use it until the next day.

Our objective is to not only point out the problems that we have on campus, but also to recommend solutions. In this regard, we have already prepared a report on decreasing the consumption of paper on campus. We wish to include all aspects in our proposal and not just paper. If you are interested, contact us at: GreenerGators@gmail.com.

The survey will be available until the end of October. No one currently knows how UHD's future will be charted. Everyone will have to keep filling in the squares until the results are scanned.

The American College and University Presidents' Climate Commitment, we are required to have this information before we could implement appropriate energy-saving measures on campus; a requirement of being in good standing for ACUPCC. It is a little embarrassing when we read about other universities that conducted their first GGI as early as 1990.

Almost two decades later, when campuses such as Tulane University, Tufts University and others have already conducted the inventory- some several times since then- we still have not and an alarm should be ringing for us. Not all campuses that conducted a GGI are signatories of ACUPCC; therefore, we have more reason to complete our inventory as soon as possible.

With the dream of making every Gator a Green Gator, Greener Gators

Green Tip: Make sure to turn the computers off if you are here late on campus. It's likely that the next person won't use it until the next day.

said, "It was just like a full studio and it sounds as good as any studio out there. It's really nice and you can live and record so you don't have to pay for studio expenses and stuff like that." The EP itself is full of fun tracks.

Totally danceable and fun to sing along with, Breathe Electric could hit radio stations, club DJs, or music venues near you and sweep you off those stiff feet and onto the dance floor. If you have not heard of this EP or band, I recommend the tracks Emotion or The Average to listeners. If you like bands like Native Texans, PlayRadioPlay! or Forever the Sickest Kids, I would definitely recommend this EP for your iTunes. 'I wanted something that was fun and not too negative and that could get kids upbeat," Harris said about the process of making his EP. Breathe Electric will be recording more in October as well as touring again in November with Electronica and Screamo band, Brokencyde.

Although they have a slightly different style, Brokencyde opens them up to all kinds of new fans and venues that will hopefully help Harris to accomplish his dream. "I would love to make music a career of mine. I mean, I know that is something a lot of people want, but that's really ultimately what I want to do with the rest of my life," Harris said.
