

Curriculum Vitae Guide

The terms curriculum and vitae are derived from Latin and mean "courses of my life". Résumé, on the other hand, is French for "summary." In industry, both in and outside of the US, people refer to curriculum vitae (CV)s and résumés interchangeably.

Curriculum Vitae vs. Résumés

Both CVs and résumés are personalized for the specific job or industry to which you are applying. These documents present you as the best qualified candidate and are used to get an interview.

	Curriculum Vitae	Résumés
Goal	Showcase academic, research and professional accomplishments to grad school, academic positions, or grants	To obtain a job outside of academia
Audience	Admissions committees, Academics	Employers and networking contacts
Focus/Content	Experience-based: Why are you an expert in your field? Complete history of academic, professional, and career related activities	Contribution-based: How did you make a difference where you worked? Targeted to the industry/position
Length	As long as necessary. Length can indicate accomplishments. Typically 1-4 pages	Shorter is better Typically 1 page for entry level

Curriculum Vitae Structure

Include what seems appropriate for your area of specialty and always present information in reverse chronological order.

CONTENT - Align the order of your experiences with the needs of the graduate school or employer. Put the most relevant sections first based on the standards set by the degree program or organization. DO YOUR RESEARCH and check their website.

Contact information: At the top, include your name and contact information (address, phone number, email address). Outside of the US, many CVs include even more personal information, such as gender, date of birth, marital status, and even names of children. Unless you are applying to a job outside of the United States, do not include this extra information.

Education: This may include college and graduate study. Include the school attended, dates of study, and degree received in reverse chronological order.

Honors and Awards: This may include dean's list standings, departmental awards, scholarships, fellowships, and membership in any honors associations.

Thesis/Dissertation: Include your thesis or dissertation title. You may also include a brief sentence or two on your paper, and/or the name of your advisor.

Research Experience: List any research experience you have, including where you worked, when, and with whom. Include any publications resulting from your research.

Publications and Presentations: List any publications you have written, co-written, or contributed to. Include all necessary bibliographic information. You should also include any pieces you are currently working on. Include papers you presented at conferences and/or associations: list the name of the paper, the conference name and location, and the date.

Teaching Experience: List any teaching positions you have held. Include the school, course name, and semester. You may also include any other relevant tutoring or group leadership experience.

Skills: List any relevant skills you have not yet mentioned. This may include language skills, computer skills, administrative skills, etc.

Professional Memberships: List any professional associations to which you belong. If you are a board member of the association, list your title. Describe projects you worked on, if applicable.

Internships: This is also called Field Experience. List all relevant internship experiences paid and unpaid

Study Abroad: Describe experiences that developed your marketable skills

Work Experience: List relevant work experience; this may include non-academic work. List the employer, position, and dates of employment. Include a brief list (3 bullet points) of your accomplishments and/or duties.

Organization Involvement: Include any volunteer or service work you have done, as well as any clubs or organizations to which you have belonged. You can also include any study abroad experiences here if you have not already mentioned them.

Transforming Your CV into a Résumé

You may need both a CV and a résumé for your job search. Sending the appropriate document (CV or résumé) tells employers that you can distinguish the differences between the academic and non-academic environments and that you can adapt your skills to either environment. Most employers in industry prefer a résumé. When rearranging your CV to make it a résumé:

- Do not exceed one page.
- Re-evaluate your experience. Think creatively about how your academic experience can be translated into the necessary skills for a non-academic environment. Consider skills of project management, leadership, teamwork, effective communication, and meeting deadlines.
- Choose action verbs to describe your experience.
- Put your strengths first. List your professional experience or your degree first, depending on which is most important for a specific position.
- Optional to include a well-written profile or summary; state the skills or abilities you possess tailored to the job description or industry. Be sure that your résumé supports your summary.
- Emphasize skills and accomplishments.
- List only relevant presentations, publications, and papers.
- Have someone proofread it.
